There is no way to accurately see what the cafeteria in Russell House is serving without first going there physically. This is a problem because oftentimes it may not be worth the time it takes to check if the food is not to your liking. It would make life more convenient for students on campus if there were a website or app that simply showed what was available in the cafeteria at what time of the day.